Dear Mr. Sinicrope:

As you already know from speaking to my friend Robert Giustra, my name is Antonino (Nino) Sapone. Robert is back in Canada now but he was kind enough to translate this letter in English for me by email.

I live in Campo Calabro a suburb of the city of Reggio Calabria, I'm 33 years old, married and have a daughter. I work for l'INPS (i.e. federal pensions) but during my spare time, as I have been doing for the last 10 years, I pursue my passion: historical research on my great-grandfather's town, S. Alessio in Aspromonte, a small village of 400 inhabitants near Reggio Calabria. My research on S. Alessio has lead to a book that I published in the summer of 2001 which I will send you by mail (with a few documents pertaining to your family) and has earned me an honorary fellowship in our government's "Calabria Region Ministry of Cultural & Historical Affaires". I'm member of Calabrese Historical Society and my research has also been discussed in various conferences and published in a number of newspaper articles.

My current project is very ambitious: the reconstruction of the S. Alessio family tree, that is, the family trees of every family with origins in S. Alessio from the 1500's to today. This research covers about 70 surnames and hundreds of families. The scope of the project is further complicated by the fact that thousands of Calabrese emigrated from Italy in search of a better life. During the period from 1880 and 1914 most Calabrese immigrants settled in the United States, Argentina and Brazil; after the Second World War Western Europe, Australia and Canada became the destinations of choice.

Of the 70 or so surnames in S. Alessio, a few in particular are very unique; Sinicropi is one of these unique surnames. All of the Sinicropi's in the world can trace their origin in the 1500's to the mountain village of Podargoni which is only a few miles from S. Alessio. By the late 1600's the Sinicropi's had expanded from Podargoni into the surrounding villages of S. Alessio, S. Stefano and Laganadi; by the mid 1700's they had dispersed throughout the province and today they're all over the world. What makes "Sinicropi" unique is the fact that all Sinicropi's can be traced back to Podargoni. By consulting all of the available historical documents, notary records and the parish archives of nearly every parish in the diocese, I've reconstructed the history of the Sinicropi family from its origins in the 1500's in Podargoni. As a result, my objective of reconstructing the family tree of S. Alessio has therefore expanded to include the reconstruction of the entire family history of a few selected family surnames, Sinicropi included.

When Robert and I contacted you last month we were endeavoring to contact all the Sinicropi's in the United States with a view to reconstructing the last 100 years of the Sinicropi family in America. As discussed, attached you will find a small extract of your family tree. Please review the family tree info at your convenience, it would be most appreciated if you could complete the missing information such as all places and dates of birth, marriage and death. Old family photos and a short history of your family in America would also be helpful.

I have about a year of research left before I will be ready to begin writing the Sinicropi family history. Ultimately I would like to make the research available to all of the world's Sinicropi's in the form of a free Sinicropi Family web site. All my research will also be donated to the Reggio Calabria State Archive and made available in their Calabrese historical research department. Please rest assured however that none of your information will be made available either in print or in the public domain without your consent.

Thank you once again for your interest in helping me realize this ambitious project. Although we did not speak directly, I could hear your enthusiasm over the telephone, it is very rewarding to find an individual so proud of his origins.

Your time is greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,
Nino Sapone
